[1 Jun 2014]Pages Saturday, 20 March 2010 Better than a Dime a Dozen Thank you for letting me join in with this week's I could ha' done better but I couldn't get around to it meme. I could definitely have done better...I made muffins and I didn't have any eggs in the house when I went to make them so I used dried egg powder...ugh! it tastes ok though...but the muffins need some flavour, so next time I'll add some baking powder. I had a great week! I have been very busy this week. My oh-my was the first part of the week, and I got to spend the second half of the week with my two best friends! I got to meet my friend Holly up in Lewisham and spend two nights in a row at her house! Holly is like a little sister to me, and we spend our weekends together watching crap movies and eating choc top! LOL We were up in her house for two nights and we watched lots of movies and ate choc top! LOL But one of the best parts of the week was definitely Friday, when we all got together for dinner...and ended up going to a bar for a drink! It was awesome! We were all really tired so we left early, but we had so much fun! Then the next day we all went shopping, got everything we needed and enjoyed some Thai food at a restaurant! It was so much fun and we all had such a great time, and it was even 1d6a3396d6

Rain Alarm is a desktop gadget designed to provide basic weather forecasts for US and non-US regions across the globe. The purpose of Rain Alarm is to deliver a prognostic of weather conditions (such as rain and snow) that does not include temperatures or an extensive forecast for days ahead. It comes in the form of a widget that works on Windows Vista and Window 7 only, thereby it is useless on other operating systems. The program doesn't require installation, as a simple double click will suffice to get it accommodated on the system. The widget comes with coverage for the following states: Canada, Australia, Japan, Korea, UK, Ireland, Germany, Austria, Iceland, The Netherlands and Argentina, to name just a few (the complete list is revealed bellow, in the product's description). Following the same trend as most desktop widgets, Rain Alarm is characterized by a minimalistic appearance that can take a while to get used to, as it encases a set of indicators that cannot be comprehended by simply looking at them. However, prior to any operation, it is mandatory to select the location for the weather forecast and this can easily be achieved using the Options window. Here, you are provided with a little search box where entering the name of your town should suffice to retrieve the expected results on the adjacent map. If you haven't been located correctly, you can drag the little pin to a specific area. Also from the Options section, you will be able to configure parameters such as sensitivity, units, update interval, as well as to turn on notifications and sounds. As soon as you press the 'OK' button, the widget displays a set of indicators for rain distance, intensity and affected area, which are represented graphically on top of three bars. If you click any of them, you will be redirected to a webpage where an extensive weather forecast is displayed. Truth be told, we're rooting for more suggestive indicators, as the current representation can be misleading. Also, support for more countries would be welcomed. v1.4.9 - Direct access to Google Maps Added direct access to Google Maps to get an overview of your location and for each weather station. v1.4.8 - Added forecasts for the city of Berlin. v1.4.7 - Improved calendar. v1.4.6 - French translations. v1.4.5

★ Rain Alarm is a small utility that can be easily installed on the Desktop and allows you to receive weather alerts for different locations. It is a simple utility that can be used as a desktop notification tool and is aimed to be lightweight and fast. By default, the application is set to display the icons of popular weather websites. You can customize the list of sites to include your preferred websites. Moreover, you can select the types of notifications that the application should display: rain and snow. ★ Key features: - Supports different location settings. You can either choose to receive location-specific notifications or choose all locations in order to receive notifications for all of them. The location can be chosen in a single step or you can manually type the name of the location. You can even choose your current location to be displayed as a current location instead of a list of locations. - You can choose which kind of weather alerts you want to receive. They include: rain and snow. The setting can be changed by you at any time. - The application can be used as a desktop notification tool. You can set the settings of the notification icon in order to decide if you want the notification to be a quick info message (e.g. providing the current temperature), a warning message, or a reminder message (e.g. providing the current forecast). - The application can also be used as a weather widget. You can add the icon of the application to your taskbar, where you will be able to get an overview of the current weather conditions. Moreover, the weather widget can provide you with the weather forecast information in a graphical form. You can even control the notification display in the weather widget. You can toggle whether the icon of the application should show the current temperature, the current forecast or both. Moreover, the weather widget can show the hourly, daily or weekly forecasts. - It supports live tiles. You can receive the weather updates right on your desktop and the live tile can also update itself by itself. You can customize the live tile in order to display the notification, the weather forecast or both. You can choose how often the weather tile should update and the information that is displayed on the tile. - The application is very lightweight and it takes up just 22.7 MB of space on the disk.
