Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a process for manufacturing a semiconductor device, and more particularly, to a process for performing metal wiring by an oblique ion implantation. 2. Description of the Prior Art A process for forming a semiconductor integrated circuit of a MISFET on a semiconductor substrate has been known. The process includes the steps of: forming a gate insulation film on a silicon substrate, forming a gate electrode on the gate insulation film, doping impurities in one part of the silicon substrate with the gate electrode being used as a mask, forming a source and a drain on the impurity-doped part of the silicon substrate, forming an electrode wiring made of polysilicon on the gate electrode, and forming source and drain diffusion layers on the substrate. With recent enhancement of the integration of the semiconductor integrated circuit, it has become difficult to further reduce the minimum structure and to obtain a satisfactory fabrication yield. As a result, a new process has been developed for the purpose of forming a small structure and a shallow junction depth of the impurity diffusion layer. In this process, ion implantation is used for performing boron ions or BF.sub.2.sup.+ ions into a part of the silicon substrate. In the above ion implantation, the position of the mask for the ion implantation is required to be accurately controlled, and a difficulty is involved in such a requirement. Therefore, the process has been adopted to perform ion implantation after forming a metal film on a surface of the silicon substrate. The above metal film is formed by: vacuum depositing aluminum on the silicon substrate, annealing the substrate, and dipping the substrate in a solution in which the substrate is cleaned and made wet, after the aluminum film is formed. However, in this process, since aluminum used in the solution diffuses in the silicon substrate, there is a disadvantage in that the junction depth becomes deep as a whole. As a result, a high concentration dopant profile cannot be obtained.He was born in Beijing d0c515b9f4
